

The Display Gardens in . . . Winter

By James Nachel

The Arboretum in winter presents new and unlimited perspectives for visitors. Fresh snow is one of the most beautiful and exquisite decorations of the winter landscape . . . windswept into delicate dunes . . . softly sifted through a lattice of branches . . . deeply etched with shadows. The play of light and shadow on snow-covered surfaces can transform even the most common and familiar scenes into places of magic and sparkling crystalline beauty. Certain are the joys of winter.
